

Sparse farther-sighted trees improve forest tradeoffs

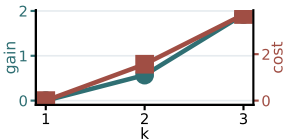

k-sighted induction evaluates splits through optimized local descendants.

Bounded non-greedy splits

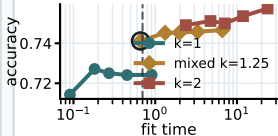

Split choice looks ahead to descendant leaves.

Uniform sight is costly

Accuracy rises slowly; time rises sharply.

Sparse sight helps forests

At fixed time, mixed forests can be higher.

Takeaway: greedy trees are strong; use extra sight sparsely inside forests.